General Meeting — Wednesday, September 12, 2018 Peace Center, 3916 Sepulveda Boulevard, Culver City Candidate Endorsements for the November 6 election

President's Message by Amy Cherness: The President's men are turning on him

President Trump has been having a rough week. Many of his close advisors have decided to talk about his wrongdoings and speak with federal prosecutors. Trump has been shaken by the disloyalty, as his allies have turned against him.

Allen Weisselberg, the chief financial officer of the Trump Organization, was granted immunity in the investigation of Michael Cohen—Trump's personal attorney.

Michael Cohen pleaded guilty to violating campaign finance laws at Trump's direction. He said that Trump ordered him to illegally interfere with the 2016 election.

President Trump has always said that he values loyalty the most in his friends and allies. It looks as though these people are being less than loyal, and looking out for themselves.

Another person Trump is upset with is Attorney General Jeff Sessions, because he recused himself from the Russia probe.

It looks like the President needs to get a new group of allies or suffer the consequences of what people will say about him.

Culver City Democratic Club member Dr. Tashon McKeithan is running for School Board

As an educator with over 20 years experience, Doctor Tashon McKeithan is a champion for strong early childhood education, increased professional development for teachers and administrators, supports for social emotional learning and mental health, as well as outdoor education. Additionally, she has worked to build external partnerships and has been the recipient of substantial grants used to rebuild an outdoor play space and to create a school-based free mental health clinic to support vulnerable families.

She was raised by her paternal grandparents in a working class neighborhood in New York City. Her grandfather worked as a custodian and her grandmother worked in the kitchen of a public school cafeteria. Her grandfather was a functional illiterate and her grandmother was only able to read and write on a basic level. They were unable to gain access to quality schooling in their lifetime, but recognized that a good educational foundation could unlock doors. Her grandparents and teachers instilled in her a desire to learn and work hard to achieve her dreams.

Her love of learning developed into a love of teaching. She has worked in education for the past twenty years, the majority of that time working in public schools. As principal of a school where 25 percent of the population consisted of children with special needs, she made it her mission to provide quality programs and put highly qualified teachers in classrooms. She has a history of collaborating with outside organizations to support arts programming, partnering with local colleges to provide developmentally appropriate education, writing grants for technology enhancements, and working with non-profit organizations on school beautification projects. Her passion for children and families, along with her dedication to providing quality education to all, has led her to run for Culver City School Board.

She previously worked as a teacher and administrator in public schools in the New York City Department of Education. Tashon currently works as the Director of Early Childhood Programs at The Center for Early Education.

Tashon is married and has one child. She often attends her daughter's tennis tournaments and gymnastics competitions on the weekends. Tashon enjoys volunteering and listening to audio books.

Di's Corner: by Diane Rosenberg

Congresswoman Karen Bass spoke to a packed house at our general meeting on August 8. At the end of her talk the club endorsed her for re-election. Our featured speaker was Water District Director Scott Houston. He's also running for re-election and the club endorsed him as well. Javier Perez, running for Superior Court Judge, also spoke briefly and was endorsed by the club.

On Tuesday, August 7, club executive board member Herb Rosenberg felt dizzy, like having vertigo, and had to be transported to the hospital. He is doing well. His doctors are running tests and tell us he will be home soon.

Herb has had dizzy spells and vertigo for some months, and sometimes couldn't stand up. I would give him two Excedrins and it would go away. He would get these episodes twice a week and not get another one for two weeks. Each time he had these episodes I would give him two excedrins. On Tuesday, August 7, he had another episode in the morning. I gave him two excedrins but it didn't help. I called the paramedics and they transported him to the hospital where they did an MRI. It showed that he has been having mini strokes. The one on Tuesday was a little more severe. They admitted him. The doctor did tell us that Excedrins contain aspirin and another ingredient which helps for headaches and prevents blood clots.

Herb's speech and ability to swallow are impaired. They have him on assisted oxygen and feeding. He is showing signs of improvement slowly and we are taking things day by day. Every day is one step better than the day before.

On Friday, August 10, he was put on a ventilator in the ICU. The following Friday, August 17, they transported him to Kindred Hospital, 5525 W. Slauson Ave., L.A. 90056 (used to be Fox Hills Hospital).

They are now starting to wean him off of the ventilator. Yes, he can have visitors. If any members want to call me for updates, they can. My number is 310-398-5328.

Endorsements

Some Democrats are running for office this year with only Republican opposition. Congresswoman Karen Bass, Water District Director Scott Houston, and Deputy District Attorney Javier Perez were endorsed by the Club at the August meeting. We will have a chance to endorse a number of other Democrats, who are running against Republicans, at the September 12 meeting. They are: Gavin Newsom, Governor; Alex Padilla, Secretary of State; Betty Yee, Controller; Fiona Ma, Treasurer; Xavier Becerra, Attorney General; Ricardo Lara, Insurance Commissioner; Holly Mitchell, State Senate; Tony Vazquez, State Board of Equalization District 3; Jeffrey Prang, Los Angeles County Assessor.

Offices in which two Democrats are running against each other are listed on the sample ballot on page three. Also listed on the sample ballot are local ballot propositions. State ballot propositions were voted on at the August meeting and the results are on page four. Culver City School Board candidates are all Democrats running unopposed. They are on the sample ballot as well, and we have invited them to come to the September meeting to introduce themselves.

CCDC member Summer McBride is a School Board Candidate

As a parent of five children in Culver City schools, I'm passionate about our district and have spent the last nine years working within our community supporting the efforts and goals of the Culver City Unified School District.

Experience: I've been honored to serve on the Culver City School Board for the last 18 months. I've also served as 1st Vice President of the Culver City Council of PTAs, School Site Council, and the district's Equity Advisory Council. I've held positions as PTA Corresponding Secretary, Executive Vice President, and President. In addition to my work in the district, I have the privilege of working for a nonprofit community clinic in Los Angeles where I teach parenting classes, including a court-approved curriculum designed to assist parents working within the system to retain custody or be reunited with their children. Previously, I worked for the Loyola Marymount University School of Education in the Department of Language and Culture and served as the coordinator for the School's Student Success Center supporting student teachers.

Vision: Culver City has great schools, but they can be even better. I look forward to continuing the work I've already started to help ensure equity and access for all students. To support college and career readiness for every CCUSD student, we must continue providing facilities that are clean, safe, and designed for 21st century learning; teachers who are fully supported and trained; services that meet the dynamic academic and social-emotional needs of our students; and curricula and materials that are current and relevant. Excellent financial stewardship is vital to meeting these needs and optimizing our resources.

Commitment: I will spend the next four years working within our district, listening to and learning from the voices of all stakeholders, while advocating for state and nationwide accountability for full funding, equity, and integrated support for all students of all abilities.
